From the Editter: One Flap at a Time

Our dear Magnificent Happy Coo Birds,

The newest issue of Wings of the Coo has landed! So fluff those feathers, grab your favourite cuppa, and settle into the comfiest nest you can find. Inside you'll discover festival news, fun community adventures, inspiring articles, Flowerside stories, cheerful updates, photos and plenty of reasons to smile.

While the world sometimes feels a little stormy, our flock keeps singing, dancing, contributing, and proving that happiness grows best in human connection and essential interactions.

Thank you for bringing your kindness, creativity, and wonderfully unique wing-flaps to our community. Every little flap helps us all fly a little higher. Now turn the page... and remember: no professional bird licence is required to enjoy this flight. Happy reading and happy ascending!

With joy, The Editorial Team

Message From the Board

Dear Members, volunteers and friends,

As we celebrate our second anniversary with the ACNC, our dedicated team has helped us reach a new Flowerside milestone in growth and blending into a beautiful festival.

Board also welcome Sachico Suzuki as a new board member. She will start her duties from October 2026. We also wish all the success with Y-combinator for our dear devoted volunteer Leon Mojarrabi.

As for other matters, while our community discourse activities are continue to expand our collective knowledge, much of this valuable information through our volunteer meetings remains scattered across meeting minutes and emails over years. To scale our discourse and research, our foundation is partnering with Unity Language Center to build a centralized, open-access journal repository such as peer reviewed OSJ journal hosting platforms and, Dspace or others.

We hope these depository hubs dynamically capture and broadcast our shared insights on happiness, integrating with other research repositories to enhance our reach. By establishing a permanent, free public resource, we ensure our data remains highly relevant, authoritative, and universally accessible, while elevating and safeguarding the critical work of our volunteers and discourse team.

We also want to congratulate the Lines of Effort team! Working closely with the Discourse and Management teams, they brought our culture of learning to life by practicing and learning two traditional circular dance routines. These traditional community dance circles are powerful living proof that shared celebrations can spread happiness and fuel the normative power of happiness for all that develop around these circles.

Our management teams continue to safeguard and strengthen our financial position while learning to navigate complex, evolving regulatory frameworks.

Every person has a gift; every culture has a light. Together, they illuminate pathways of understanding, creativity, and shared learning to connect global festival communities and inspire happiness for all. We are incredibly proud of our volunteers, who remain steadfast in their focus. We extend our heartfelt thanks to all volunteers and team members for their continuing outstanding efforts.

The Flow of one Common Happiness

The Hidden Currents of Human Happiness in an Intelligent Age

We are living in an extraordinary age. The human brain, shaped across unimaginable time, is nature's remarkable instrument of intelligence. Now we have created another kind of intelligence: machines of silicon and circuits that can remember, calculate, recognise patterns and open possibilities beyond what any individual mind can hold. Both are extraordinary. Yet the deeper question is not simply how intelligent we can become, but what our intelligence serves.

A GPS map can reveal thousands of roads, but it cannot choose our destination. Artificial intelligence can expand what we can do. But it cannot answer the question: What should we become? That question remains deeply human.

More than a century ago, Bahá'u'lláh wrote: "Regard man as a mine rich in gems of inestimable value. Education can, alone, cause it to reveal its treasures, and enable mankind to benefit therefrom."

This raises a fascinating possibility: how much of the human mine remains undiscovered?

Within every person are capacities that often awaken through relationship with others: compassion, justice, courage, humility, creativity, wisdom and love. We do not develop these qualities in isolation. They emerge through interaction, conversation, friendship, challenge, service and care.

Where Does Happiness Actually Live?

Life flows as a river of contrasts: the raw fury of the waterfall, and the quiet, mystic magic of the floating bubble. Yet, amidst this turbulent current, is happiness something we possess internally, or is it something that happens between us? Perhaps happiness lives neither entirely within us nor entirely outside us. Perhaps it lives in the meeting of the essential relations in their flow states.

Consider how life has curious ways of bringing people together, echoing the movement of water. Two paths cross. Two streams meet. When these separate currents collide, they create a rush of unexpected connection—much like a sudden, thunderous waterfall in the gardens of heart and mind. Have you ever met someone by chance and wondered whether that meeting was truly an accident? We may never know what brought us to that particular place, at that particular hour, beside that particular person. We only know that our streams converged, and that mystery is part of the natural beauty. And perhaps this is one of the quiet mysteries of human happiness: we do not create the river alone, and yet every encounter can change the direction of its flow.

When a conversation begins, something shifts. A barrier lifts, an idea appears, a friendship begins, and suddenly the direction of life is slightly different. These brief, passing encounters are the fleeting bubbles of human existence. Think of the smile that receives a smile. Or the Happiness of the child who discovers that someone believes in them.

The unexpected friendship that changes the direction of a day, or the person who sits beside us at exactly the moment we need someone there. These moments are incredibly brief, yet each one is self-similar—a tiny, fragile sphere that somehow holds and mirrors the entire beauty of the wider interacting universe on its delicate soft surface.

Ultimately, a simple conversation can become a refreshing spring in another person's life, calming the roar of their heaviest waterfalls. A word of encouragement can help someone find their direction again, and a small acts of kindness and brighting smile can travel much further than we will ever see. Perhaps the most interesting thing about human connection is that we constantly participate in these natural ripples. We cast our actions into the current, creating brief but pure, mystic bubbles of transformative joy whose beginnings and endings remain beautifully invisible to us.

And when the waterfall settles, we may discover something remarkable: the clear crystal water was not somewhere else. The crystal water and its gems were already within us. They were waiting to be revealed in our creative short bubbles of life. Every expression of art, poetry, dreaming and hope creates the conditions from which new possibilities of connections and merging of the flows emerge.

Bahá'u'lláh proclaimed: "The earth is but one country, and mankind its citizens." If humanity is the citizens of one planet, then our happiness cannot be completely separated from the happiness of others. Your flourishing creates possibilities for my flourishing. My wellbeing can create possibilities for yours.

In a way, this is also true of intelligence itself. It needs wisdom to converse and to guide its direction. And surely as machines become increasingly capable, the importance of human accompanying of wisdom becomes greater, not smaller.

Technology can connect us across continents in seconds. But connection is not the same as relationship. We can communicate with thousands of people and still feel lonely. We can have access to more information than any previous generation and still struggle to know what is worth knowing. The challenge of the future is therefore not simply to create more intelligence.

It is to cultivate wisdom, relationship and purpose alongside it. The future will not be measured only by whether machines become smarter than humans. It will also be measured by whether humans become wiser through what machines make possible. Does intelligence serve true love? Does technology increases encounter and strengthen community? Does knowledge become a channel to service?

An ever-advancing civilization is not simply one filled with smarter machines. It is one in which people learn to see one another differently: not as strangers, competitors or obstacles, but as human beings connected to the same living story.

And this brings us back to happiness.

Maybe happiness is not a destination waiting at the end of the road. Maybe it is the flow created when human beings begin interacting to care for one another.

From heart to heart. From person to person. From family to community. From community to the world and until the happiness of one becomes increasingly connected with the happiness of all.

Perhaps that is what the normative power of an ever-advancing civilization truly looks like. Not merely a world with smarter machines, but a world in which intelligence, wisdom, and love flow together toward one common happiness for all.

These are the people who make the happiness for all a reality.

Message from Management Team

Welcome to the Sachi Foundation Annual Report 2025–2026. What a joyful year it has been! Through our growing culture of learning, our lines of efforts, festival participation, devotional and and the dedication of our volunteers, with just enough tea and laughter to keep us going, we have continued to create spaces where cultures connect, communities flourish, and shared learning grows. Inspired by the words of Dr 'Alí Muḥammad Varqá, we continue to be guided by our conviction: The world's true happiness is the joy it leaves no one out of.

In a major milestone for Sachi Community, we offer our warmest congratulations and a very happy welcome to our new board member, Mrs Sachiko Suzuki! Her official duty begins this October!

Dear friends and suppoters of our mission, Sachi Foundation is a small organization with big dreams and ambitious goals. While AI and technology is changing the world, nothing replaces the pure joy of seeing people walk, smile, and happy together. Let's keep serving, learning, and lifting one another up because everyone deserves a reason to smile.

Thanks to the ongoing work of our Discourse and Festival Committees and our close collaboration with the Axial and Jamboree Heights Devotional Groups, our ideas are blossoming into meaningful action. Together, we turn our cultural conversations and connections into building lifelong friendships, and foster a joyful culture of learning.

We believe that while conversations introduce a norm, collective lines of action are what actually animate and validate it. This normative power of action, driven by joyful service, sits at the very heart of the Nine Year Plan of the Universal House of Justice.

We warmly invite you to celebrate the achievements, lessons learned , friendships, and joyful moments that shaped our journey throughout 2025–2026.

Thank you for being part of our Flowerside story of growth. With gratitude, appreciation, and joy,

The Sachi Foundation Management Team (SAMAT)

Foundation General Report:

Board Activity:

The board met three times during the year and held two additional meetings with members. Board members also participate regularly every Sunday in the Jamboree Heights Devotional Gathering via Zoom online.

Festival Organizing Team / Lines of Effort Committee Report: The Festival Organizing Team was involved in three major festivals between July 2025 and June 2026: Japan Festival Sunshine Coast, Matsuri Brisbane Festival, and Festuri Festival . The team also hosted the Kirei Yakuzen community wellness event on five occasions, promoting beauty, balance, and holistic wellness through medicinal food. Additionally, the lines of effort team organized two Clean Up Australia Day events (28 March, 2026 and 28 June 2026), encouraging environmental care and community participation. We also brought cultures together through Tibetan circular dance and the Laotian Lam Vong, transforming traditional movement into a celebration of unity, and shared happiness.

Discourse Committee Report

The Discourse team is currently continuing to work on three ongoing discourse production projects:

The Flight of Virtues – developing educational lesson plans,
The Quantum Entanglement of Virtues and Quantum Farming Research,
The Directory of Cultural Festival States,

The committee also contributed to writing articles for the Wings of the Coö newsletter in collaboration with the Lines of Effort Team.

Two discourse team members wrote and submitted a paper called "Scale-Free Natural Law: Legal Pluralism, Hubs of Justice, and the Rule of Law under Globalization."

Management Team Report:

This year, the management team continued to strengthen the foundations of Sachi Foundation by improving operational systems, encouraging participation, and supporting a culture of transparency and consultation.

- Introduced the Xero accounting system across the organisation to enhance financial management, accuracy, and accountability.
- Hosted three volunteer meetings to create spaces for consultation, shared learning, feedback, and collective participation.
- Collected and reconciled funds throughout the 2025–2026 financial year, strengthening financial stewardship and reporting.
- Developed consultation agendas for volunteer gatherings and the Annual General Meeting to support meaningful dialogue and collective decision-making.
- Prepared key information for the Annual General Meeting consultation, helping ensure clear communication, transparency, and robust governance.

Partner Reports:

Unity Language Center – Unity Language Center aims to transition from a traditional language school into a discourse-based system inspired by the Ruhi Institute's capacity-building framework. The objective is to ensure that language learning is in phase with a culture of learning.

Under this model, classrooms would operate as collaborative study circles where students will explore moral vocabulary, learn cultural literature, and practice language through mutual consultation and flowery celebrations.

This future approach will rely on accompaniment, the flight of virtues, and service projects—empowering learners to master a language while actively contributing to local community development

Misachi Garden Food Forest : This year, the Misachi Garden Food Forest proudly contributed about $440 to the Sachi Foundation Fund, standing in solidarity with initiatives that spread happiness, spiritual and cultural vitalisation, and well-being.

Youth Empowerment Projects and Flight of Virtues: The Youth Empowerment Projects and the Flight of Virtues initiative are making steady gradual progress developing the learning materials. Ms. Sachiko Suzuki will coordinate the connection with the local community networks ensuring all modules align with meaningful growth goals of the Sachi Foundation.

Axial Devotional group: Sachi Foundation continue to provide zoom space for their weekly devotional gathering.

Tennen Saien Community Garden:

Tennen 天然 community garden, began with the vision of creating a community that learns from nature, has now entered its tenth year.

During the winter, we make miso from soybeans grown on our farm, and in the spring, prepare traditional mugwort rice cakes. Through these seasonal activities, we continue to practice and share the wisdom of Japan's traditional way of life.

In May, we welcomed five visitors from New Zealand. Together, we visited a nearby friend's open garden and exchanged ideas about creating vibrant and thriving communities while enjoying the beauty of the garden and its natural surroundings. This year's theme is exploring how we can make better use of the herbs and wild plants that grow abundantly around us.

We hope to learn from the "grandmother's medicine chest" traditions that have been passed down in many cultures and to create regular opportunities for hands-on, heart-centered activities using these natural resources. We would love to hear about the plants that are cherished and commonly used in your area. Please feel free to share your knowledge and experiences with us.
