Message from the Board

Dear Friends,

Fifteen years ago, we planted a seed of a dream: that when cultures meet in a spirit of fellowship and unity, they can achieve together what none could achieve alone. It is a dream rooted in the Dreaming times, the oldest cultural stories of this land, which teach that we belong to one another and to the earth and to the universal corroboree festival of happiness for all.

That belief is now our mission: to connect cultural festival groups, cluster their strengths, and work side by side to create and spread happiness for all.

Much has changed since those early days. We have grown through experience, friendship, and service and above all, through our dear friends, partners, and volunteers who have walked with us. By giving their time, sharing their Flowerside stories, and celebrating our milestones, they have shaped our growth. As we look ahead, new technologies, including artificial intelligence and quantum technology, are opening fresh ways to share our learning, extend conversations, and celebrate our unity of efforts.

Our deepest transformation lies in understanding how connection can build capacity. We are learning to design conversations that truly carry knowledge and become gatherings of meaning and learning grounded in shared norms. And when our shared norms are put into lines of action, they breathe life into a vibrant festival culture, where collective learning is not an event but a way of celebrating. This is how we climb the mountain path together, one step, one conversation, one heart wonder at a time.

This is the path our volunteers are walking, through festivals, community gardens, youth and senior engagement, and unity language and action programs, climbing together toward the summit of Happiness for All,

With gratitude to every friend, volunteer, and cultural group who championed us,

The Board of the Sachi Foundation

親愛なる友人の皆さまへ

15年前、私たちはひとつの夢の種を植えました。それは、異なる文化が友情と 団結の精神で出会うとき、一つの文化だけでは成し得ないことも、互いに力を 合わせることで実現できるのではないか、という夢でした。この夢は、この土 地に古くから受け継がれてきた最も古い文化の物語である「ドリーミング」に も通じています。そこには、私たちは互いにつながり合い、そして大地ともつ ながって生きている、という深い教えがあります。
その信念は、今では私たちの使命となっています。さまざまな文化のグループ をつなぎ、それぞれの持つ力を結集し、肩を並べて活動することで、すべての 人に幸せを届け、広げていくこと。活動を始めた頃から、私たちを取り巻く環 境は大きく変わりました。私たちは、経験を重ね、友情を育み、奉仕を続ける 中で成長してきました。そして何よりも、共に歩んでくださった大切な友人、 パートナー、ボランティアの皆さんの存在に支えられてきました。皆さんは貴 重な時間を分かち合い、成長の節目をともに祝いながら、それぞれの物語を私 たちと共有してくださいました。人工知能をはじめとする新しいテクノロジー も、知識を分かち合い、対話を広げていくための新たな可能性を開いています 。

そして、私たちにとって最も大きな変化は、「つながり」が人々やコミュニテ ィの力を育てていくということへの理解が深まったことです。私たちは今、知 識を本当に伝え合うことのできる対話の場をつくり、共通の価値観やルールを 土台として、意味のある学びと出会いが生まれる集いをデザインすることを学 んでいます。

そして、その共通の価値観を具体的な行動へと移すとき、そこには活気に満ち た「フェスティバル・カルチャー」が息づき始めます。そこでは、共に学ぶこ とは一度きりのイベントではなく、学びそのものを喜び、祝い合う文化となっ ていきます。それが、私たちがともに歩む道なのです。一歩ずつ、ひとつひと つの対話を重ねながら、そして、一人ひとりの心を寄せ合いながら。

私たちのボランティアは、今もこの道を歩み続けています。フェスティバル、コミュニティ・ガーデン、子どもや若者、シニア世代との交流、そして「Unity Language（ユニティ・ランゲージ）」のプログラムを通して、私たちは皆で力を合わせ、「すべての人の幸せ（Happiness for All）」という頂上を目指して、一歩ずつ歩みを進めています。これまで共に歩んでくださった、すべての友人とボランティアの皆さまに、心からの感謝を込めて。

President Mineko Oda and our new Board member Sachiko Suzuki

From The Management Team

Sachi Foundation is a community of contributors, brought together by a shared purpose: spreading happiness worldwide.

Our strength comes from people, community groups and cultures who share their time, creativity, knowledge and resources to create spaces for connection, learning and collective action.

As the Management Team, we see our role as nurturing these connections and creating pathways for ideas to grow from research and conversation into action — through Flowersides, cultural festivals, creative arts and crafts, and community-led, do-it-together initiatives. We are committed to following all relevant regulations and meeting our compliance obligations while strengthening our work, diversifying our funding, and building a sustainable foundation for future growth and lasting community impact.

Our impact is not measured only by what Sachi Foundation accomplishes itself. It is also reflected in what becomes possible when people and communities come together around a common purpose. Together, we will continue to connect, learn and create, and work towards a happier future for all.

The Year in One Story!

We turned connection into a System of Action.

Sachi Foundation provides the space for people and cultures to meet, and for example, in our food forest and community garden, that space is grown from the ground up. Through the Yakuzen community wellness event, held on five occasions, members of a Japanese cultural women group came together to share traditional Japanese approaches to food as medicine.

What began as a cultural encounter became conversation about how food can heal and nourish. That understanding began to shape shared ways of working and meeting, including how knowledge is exchanged and how the garden is cared for and having fun. From this, relationships grew beyond the organizing and get gathering events, to a more structure, and regular gatherings

The result is a growing Japanese cultural community-led group that now meets regularly to explore Japanese knowledge in the Australian ecosystem, support Japanese expertise and food experience of living in Australia, document plant discoveries that matches with the japanese community food culture, and share learning with the wider food culture communities. What began in the garden is becoming an ongoing bridge between local cultures and knowledge, and community action.

この一年を振り返って

「つながり」を、継続的な行動へ

Sachi Foundationは、人々や異なる文化が出会い、つながるための場をつくっています。その一例が、私たちの食べる森やコミュニティ・ガーデンです。ここでは、まさに大地に根を張るように、人と人とのつながりが育まれています。

全5回にわたって開催された薬膳のコミュニティ・ウェルネスイベントでは、日本文化を大切にする女性たちが集まり、食を通して健康を育む日本の伝統的な知恵を分かち合いました。文化を通じた人々の出会いは、やがて「食がどのように心身を癒やし、健やかさを育むのか」という対話へと発展していきました。そして、そこで得た理解は、知識の伝え合い方や、庭の手入れの仕方、楽しみながら協力する方法など、みんなで活動するための共通のあり方を形づくり始めました。こうして、人と人とのつながりは、イベントの企画や運営の枠を超えて、より継続的で、定期的な集まりへと発展していきました。その結果、日本文化を背景に持つ人々が主体となって運営するコミュニティが育ち、今では定期的に集まりながら、日本の知恵をオーストラリアの自然環境や暮らしの中でどのように活かせるかを探究しています。

また、日本人が培ってきた専門的な知識や、オーストラリアで暮らす中で得た食の経験を分かち合い、日本の食文化に結びつく植物を見いだして記録し、そこから得た学びを、より広い食文化のコミュニティとも共有しています。庭で始まった小さなつながりは、今、地域の文化と知識、そして人々の具体的な活動を結ぶ、継続的な架け橋へと育ちつつあります。

These are the pepole who turn 'happiness for all' from a dream into reality.

How we Make bridges between Cultures

From Points to Lines to Hubs to Fields

Every significant community action at Sachi foundation begins with a point. But points of action are not meant to stay isolated. They are designed, deliberately, to connect.

Points of action

A single contribution: a phone call, a seed, a smile, a question, a dream, a willing contributor. On its own, a point rarely looks significant. It is one person, one gesture, one thought. Its value is entirely potential: whether it stays isolated, or becomes the start of something dimensional, depends on what happens next. But if we zoom closer. We cannot have a masterpiece, a map, or a movement without that very first dot.

Lines and rays of action

Connected contributions, moving together in a direction. This momentum marks the beginning of a Line of Effort that has no beginning and no end. There is also the ray of effort that has a beginning but no end. These efforts take shape when one point connects and is followed by another : a question answered, a seed watered, a conversation continued. One discourse becomes the ground from which the next naturally emerges. Currently, the Sachi Foundation focuses on twelve distinct Lines of Effort where these points can connect.

Throughout the year, these stream lines have steadily converged, an alignment guided by the principle of an ever-advancing civilization that expands systemic capacity to bring happiness to all. This mechanism mirrors biological evolution, advancing from atomic composition to cellular structures that ultimately produce emergent consciousness.

Hubs of Effort

Every garden begins with a few seeds and a patch of tended ground. Hubs of effort are like this: places where fruitful Lines of Action are planted, cultivated and allowed to take root. What matters is not the size of an activity, but what it connects to and what becomes possible through that connection. As roots meet beneath the surface in the grden of happiness, a wider ecosystem of relationships, knowledge and capacity begins to form, so that an advance in one hub can strengthen the conditions for advance in others.

Sachi Foundation is at an early and hopeful point in its own calendar growing season. Our work centres on axial spaces: foundational places where the cultivation of virtues, devotion and collective action can first take root. Each hub gathers ideas, practices and local character in ways that give it its own voice. We then seek to connect these hubs into a wider motif of pattering, allowing each to retain its character while contributing to an emerging coherence framework for action. This is the coherence of a living cultural festival system that we are going to capitalize on. What we cultivate in the gardens of the heart and mind, we harvest in the world.

A point does not need to carry the whole journey. It only needs to connect. And perhaps the larger vision begins here: one garden, one conversation, one connection at a time.

We hold this work in service of a longer-term converging hope: a World Parliament of Cultural Festival States, a shared table where the cultures of the world might gather to consult on matters that cross borders, including the governance of global supply chains. The bridge from where we stand to such a table cannot be built just by assertion of values. It must be built through the same logic of the culture of learning: capacities practised at one scale, connected and bridged so that learning can travel, and strengthened through experience. We do not yet know the full shape of these bridges. We only know that its first two spans can be built in the places where people are already learning how to act together.

The Fashioner shapes divine creative sparks into art, craftsmanship, and cultural festivals. Meanwhile, Omniscience supplies the knowledge and data required to organize an integrated, global supply chain connecting the cultual festival states.

The coherence whole, then, is the pattern that appears when each hub of efforts keeps its own path while finding its place within a wider network motif.
The coherence whole and quantum entanglement farming of virtues is not something declared in advance. It emerges through a sequence of culture of learning practices that prove themselves as they expand.

Bridging by Design: How Connections Become a Culture of Action

Bridging does not happen by accident, and it is worth naming the construction mechanisms plainly, because they are what this impact report actually trying to describe.

First, our discourse vessels, wings of the Coo newsletter, publications, volunteer gatherings consultation, our digital channels, Flowersides and festival celebrations deliberately carrying a discourse or story from one Line to another at a certan precise time synchnoized with a festival associated with the First nation virtue seasonal calendar "the Badi Calendar".

Second, many of volunteers and members serve on more than one Line of effort, so the connection is also carried through a person rather than a document.

Third, physical spaces like Misachi Garden and our festival stalls serve as vibrant, informal hubs. They draw people in through one line of effort and convert that interest into another, widening our ecosystem of possibilities.

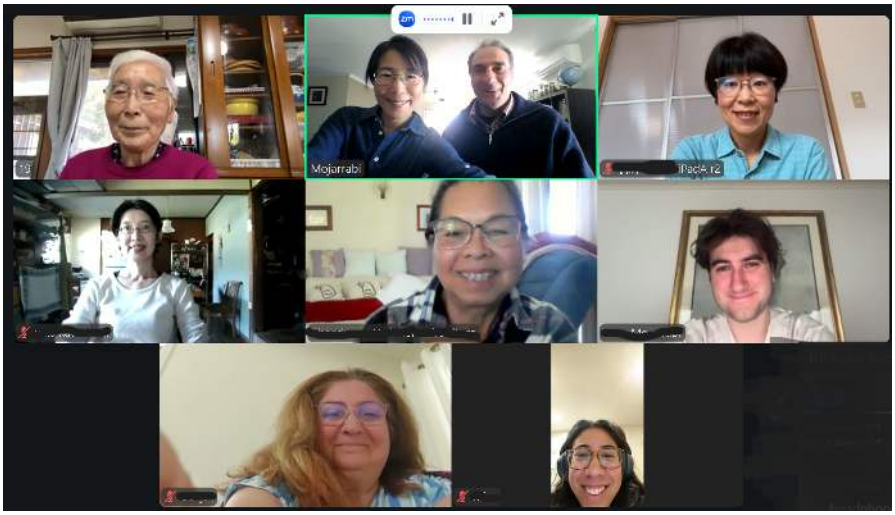

Fourth, our partner Unity Language center gives people from different Lines and cultures a shared vocabulary and cultural festival directory to describe what exactly they are consulting, so that a garden volunteer and a festival artist can recognise each other's work as part of the same effort.

And fifth, our governance and consultation processes are built to ask, of every new activity, who else this might connect and how will be the First passage time of the connections.

We offer this culture of action report with humility and warmth, and we welcome all who wish to plant, tend and grow with us.

Bridging Lines: Where Connection Becomes a Culture of Action

1. Bridging Line of Trust:

The bridge line of Trust : Turning Responsibility into Participation
Where Participation Finds Its Ground.

Governance, financial stewardship, child safety, volunteer responsibility, record-keeping and consultation may not always be visible. Yet they create essential value: trust in action. Trust gives people confidence to participate. It gives volunteers room to contribute. It gives partners confidence to collaborate. Its Essential normed creates a secure scale free substrate environment for families vulnerable and young people. Trust as a subtrate foundation make it easier for all other virtues in their lines of actions to continue advancing without having to rebuild the foundations of trust each time.

What changed? During the year, governance and operational systems increasingly functioned as shared infrastructure for the wider community. Rather than treating governance as separate from impact, we began to see responsible and trusting administration as something that enables participation.

Capacity created The Foundation is becoming better able to respond when a new opportunity appears because the basic structures of responsibility, safety and stewardship are already in place and harmonised with the ACNC regularory frameworlk.

Looking ahead We want to make these foundations easier for volunteers and partners to understand, so that people can quickly see how they can participate safely and meaningfully.

2. Bridging Line of Knowledge

What changed: Community experience increasingly became something that could be reflected upon, documented, shared and revisited. For example, activities of the Tenent Seign community garden in japan can inform our readers of our newsletter, wings of the Coo. Similary, a `festival conversation can become a research question. A Flowerside story can become a conversation with another community.

Directory of Cultural Festival States: Our discourse team volunteers have expanded the Directory with over twelve festival entries.

Capacity created: We are building an organisational memory that allows knowledge and experience to become a resource for future action.

Looking ahead We want to strengthen the way we connect publications and other discourse vessels with the activities, people and Lines from which they emerge.

3. Bridging Line of Creativity: Where Art and Imagination Becomes Encounter

Creativity Creates Encounters:

A handmade object can start a conversation. A cultural craft can carry memory. An artwork can invite curiosity. A festival display can bring strangers together. Creativity therefore does more than produce objects. It creates opportunities for people to meet.

What changed: Creative work increasingly became positioned at the meeting points between Lines of Effort. Festival stalls, youth activities, cultural encounters and garden activities provided spaces where creativity could become an invitation to conversation.

Capacity created: Artists and participants gained opportunities not only to create, but to connect their creativity with wider cultural and community activity. Looking ahead We will continue placing creative work deliberately at the seams between Lines, allowing a garden activity, youth idea, cultural tradition or conversation to become something people can see, make and share together.

4. Bridging Line of Culture: Where Celebrations Becomes a Pathway

Festivals Become Bridges of connections.

The Sunshine Coast Japan Festival and Matsuri Brisbane were among the most visible cultural points of connection during the year. Festivals bring together artists, families, volunteers, traditions, food, music, craft, language and conversation. But their deeper value lies in what happens beyond the event.

Looking ahead We will continue developing ways to follow cultural encounters beyond the festival itself and make the next point of connection easier to find.

What changed

Rather than treating festivals as isolated celebrations, Sachi Foundation increasingly are using them as points from which longer relationships could begin. A person might encounter Sachi through a stall and later discover the garden. A cultural group might meet a volunteer and later explore another collaboration. A young person might encounter a cultural activity and later become a contributor.

Capacity created Cultural celebration is becoming a pathway into wider community participation.

5. Bridging line of Conversation: Where Listening Becomes Collective Intelligence

Conversation Becomes a Form of Infrastructure Some of Sachi Foundation most important work happens without a formal stage. For example, around a table, in a garden, at a volunteer meeting, after a festival, during consultation or in a devotional gathering. One idea meets another. Someone listens. The direction changes and a new possibility emerges. That is when conversation becomes more than communication. It becomes collective intelligence.

What changed Informal conversation became increasingly recognised as part of the Foundation's infrastructure rather than as a by-product of formal activities.

Capacity created People became more able to carry questions and ideas between different settings.

Looking ahead We aim to create simple ways for important questions and insights arising informally to be captured and carried into future conversations.

6. Bridging line of Language: Where Many Meanings Meet in the Spirit of Joy

Language as a Bridge Language carries more than words. It carries memory, identity, values, culture and ways of seeing the world. The emerging Unity Language work explores concepts such as happiness, service, family, beauty, justice, community, nature and unity. The purpose is not to make every culture use the same definition. It is to allow different meanings to enter conversation.

What changed Conversations about language increasingly became grounded in actual community experiences. A discussion about service after a clean-up activity allowed participants to explore different cultural understandings rather than simply choosing one definition.

Capacity created People are becoming more comfortable holding difference and seeking understanding without requiring uniformity.

Looking ahead: We will continue exploring the remaining concepts through grounded conversations, allowing shared understanding to emerge through experience rather than imposing definitions in advance.

7. Bridging Line of Care: Where Service Takes Cultual Roots

Growing a Culture of Care

A garden is a place where things grow. But not only plants. Relationships grow there too. Misachi Garden and environmental activities create practical spaces where people can join, learn, serve and converse together. Community clean-ups extend this culture of care beyond the garden.

What changed: The garden increasingly functioned as a low-pressure point of entry into Sachi community life. People can work beside one another without needing extensive prior knowledge or formal introductions.

Capacity created Care for the earth becomes a practical pathway toward care for one another. The garden also creates opportunities for cultural, creative, environmental and educational Lines to meet.

Looking ahead: We want the garden to remain an accessible point of connection and to make pathways into other Lines of Effort easier to discover.

8. Bridging Line of Discovery: Where Better Questions Open New Possibilities

Discovery Changes the Questions We Ask: Research does more than provide answers. It can change the questions a community able to ask and consult. During the year, Sachi's discourse explored culture, technology, language, community development and collective action. Artificial intelligence opened another important field of inquiry.

What changed: Technology became part of the cultural conversation rather than a separate technical conversation. Questions arising from young people, cultural activities and community experiences were able to enter research and discussion.

Capacity created: The community is becoming more capable of asking questions about technology in relation to human values, culture and social purpose.

Looking ahead: We want research and discovery to continue travelling back into plain-language community conversations so that those who raise questions can also participate in exploring the answers.

9. Bridging Line of Contribution: Where Youth Participation Becomes Purpose

The Next Generation Is Already Here Young people are not simply the future. They are already part of the present. Cultural transmission becomes stronger when a new generation does not simply receive culture but helps shape its next expression.

What changed Flight of Virtues and wider cultural activities created opportunities for young people to create, question, consult, experiment, serve and contribute. Young people increasingly moved from participation toward contribution.

Capacity created Young people are developing confidence to see themselves as contributors to community life rather than simply recipients of activities created by others.

Looking ahead We want major festivals and garden activities to include opportunities co-designed by young people, so contribution becomes an increasingly natural part of participation.

10. Bridging Line of Partnership: Where Strengths Meet and Possibility Emerges

Where Partnership Creates New Possibilities

A partnership begins with two parties. But its greatest value may lie in what becomes possible between them. A garden connects with a cultural group. A volunteer connects with an artist. A devotional group connects with community activity. A young person connects with research. Each relationship creates another possibility.

What changed Partnerships increasingly became opportunities to discover connections beyond the original reason for collaboration.

Capacity created People and communities become more able to accomplish together what would be difficult for any one participant to accomplish alone.

Looking ahead We will continue asking a simple question of both new and existing partners: how can we best align our resources to expand our collective impact?

11. Bridging Line of Recognition: Where Joyful Celebration Creates Belonging

Celebrating What We Are Cultivating and Achieving

Joy Strengthens Belonging Joy is not only an effort outcome. It can also be a bridge. Flowerside celebrations create opportunities to recognise contribution, friendship and growth. Celebration creates gratitude. Gratitude encourages contribution. Contribution strengthens participation. Participation deepens belonging. And belonging creates more reasons to celebrate.

What changed Flowerside became a way of bringing different contributors into a shared space of recognition. Garden volunteers, cultural contributors, young people, researchers, artists and partners can see that their individual contributions belong to a larger whole.

Capacity created Celebration strengthens the social bonds that encourage people to continue contributing.

Looking ahead We want Flowerside gatherings to continue becoming opportunities for people to discover Lines of Effort beyond the one in which they normally participate.

12. Bridging Line of Collective Action: Where the Lines Become One Movement

From Many Efforts to Collective Action

This is where everything comes together. A festival creates an encounter. The encounter creates a conversation. The conversation generates understanding. Understanding reveals shared norms. Norms strengthen cooperation. Cooperation enables action. Action builds capacity. Capacity opens new possibilities for happiness.

What changed Sachi increasingly began noticing not only individual Lines of Effort but the connections between them.

Capacity created We are developing the habit of seeing the Foundation as a connected system rather than a collection of separate activities.

Looking ahead We will continue documenting these chains of connection so that future reports can show more clearly how individual contributions become collective capacity.

Looking Forward: The Horizon of Happiness

PRIORITIES FOR 2026–27 Our next stage of development will focus on three practical priorities.

1. Seamless Tracking: Capturing Every Crucial Connection We will develop a simple, low-effort way of recording significant connections as they occur rather than reconstructing them at reporting time.
2. Expanding Horizons: Multi-Line Participation We will continue creating opportunities for young people and other contributors to participate across multiple Lines rather than remaining within one program.
3. Strengthen the knowledge ecology We will continue building discourse vessels and improving the way publications, conversations, research, newsletters, briefings, gatherings and digital channels connect with the activities and people from which they emerge.

These priorities are modest by design. They are intended to strengthen the architecture already emerging rather than create another unnecessary layer of administration.

Forging the Field: The Hard Work of True Connection

Where Connection Is Still Difficult.

A report built around connection can make every relationship appear seamless. Our experience tells us otherwise.

Time is limited.

Sachi Foundation is a volunteer based community. And because deep relationships take time, some promising sparks of connection could not be fully pursued this year. We view this not as a limitation, but as a mandate to better support our people and protect the time needed to turn conversations into a deeply rooted culture of community that champions our mission.

Our records are still developing. We are becoming better at recognising connections, but many are still recorded informally. Some real examples may therefore remain invisible in our reporting.

Our language can be complex. Point, Line, Hub and Field are useful concepts for those familiar with the framework. For someone encountering Sachi Foundation for the first time, they can also sound abstract. Our continuing task is to make the framework clearer without losing the ideas it is intended to express.

Our impact is still developing.

We do not claim that a fully interconnected Quantum virtue social Field already exists as a finished project. We are actively cultivating it. That distinction matters. The true value of this impact report is not just to celebrate the milestones we have reached, but to transparently share what we are learning and what remains to be learned.

THE PEOPLE BEHIND THE IMPACT:

Every bridge described in this report was built because someone was willing to take the first step. The architecture of connection is therefore not made of discourse documents or systems conceptualized. It is made of people and cultural groups who are willing to contribute.

And this is our invitation to bring your point of thought

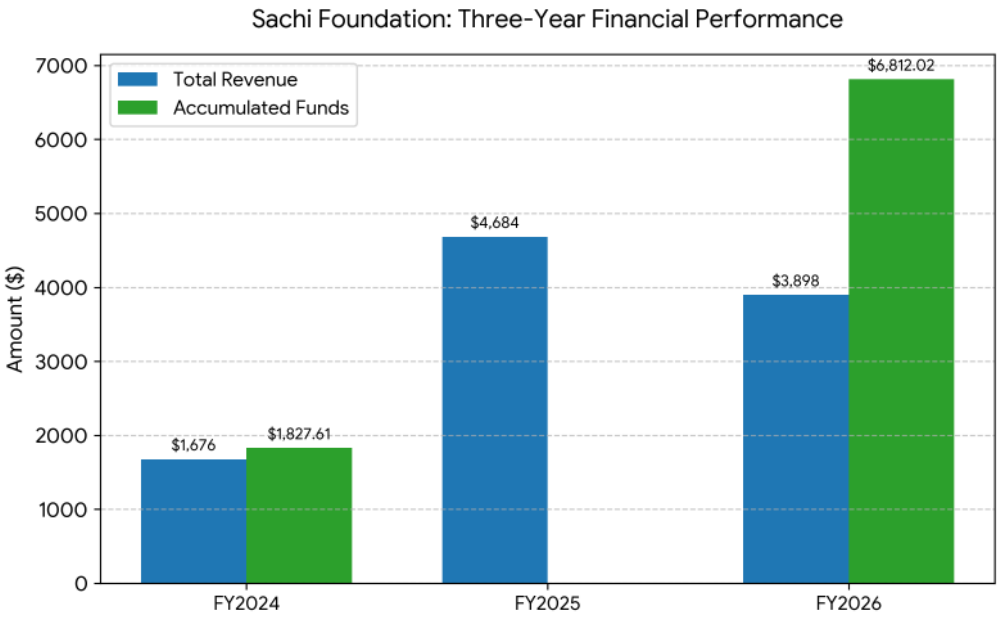

You do not need to build the entire field of virtues; you only need to bring a single point. It could be an idea, a question, a song, a story, a garden, a craft, a conversation, a smile, a friendship, or simply a willingness to listen.

We then ask: can we connect your point to another and sustain it through a required first passage of time? From there, we proceed to the next. Let the lines meet. Let the hubs grow. Let the field emerge.

The future of the Sachi Foundation will not be built by one organisation doing everything. It comes from diverse people and cultures sharing what they know. When our unique experiences connect, we discover what is truly possible.

FINANCIAL STEWARDSHIP

Strategic Revenue Surge: Total revenue grew from $1,676 in FY2024 to a peak of $4,684 in FY2025, before establishing a healthy, sustainable baseline of $3,898 in FY2026. This represents a net 132% expansion across the three years, driven heavily by successful community festival revenue, artisanal art and skilled craft production, as well as green-economy Misachi garden revenue.

Exceptional Capital Performance: Accumulated funds more than tripled, soaring from $1,827.61 to $6,812.02. The fact that capital reserves continued to increase even as top-line revenue normalized in FY2026 is clear evidence of highly strict, disciplined cost management and strong management team operational efficiency.

Pure Governance Model: 100% of all foundational donations were sourced exclusively from the founders. This zero-debt, zero-liability structure eliminates external fundraising friction, giving the foundation total strategic agility and long-term security.
